

A close-up photograph of a large pile of cricket bats and stumps. The bats are made of light-colored wood, showing natural grain patterns and some wear. They are stacked haphazardly, with some handles pointing upwards and others downwards. The background is a dark, textured surface, possibly a wooden workbench or floor, which contrasts with the lighter wood of the bats. The overall lighting is soft, highlighting the textures of the wood and the dust or sawdust scattered around the base of the pile.

GIN AGED WITH KASHMIR WILLOW

*A cricket bat is a thing of beauty. Until it breaks and is relegated to a corner of the house. We have given these bats a second life by giving them a nice shave and soaking them in a vat of our GREATER THAN Gin.
The bats might be gone, but their spirit lives on in this bottle.*
